

Winsome Richards is our contact in Perth, Western Australia.

In her own words:

“I became interested in movement programs in 1981 when I helped my own son’s learning difficulties. I have continued learning as much as I can about the “whole child approach” to learning, in particular the Move to Learn Program.

Since that time I have used movement programs and developmentally challenging obstacle courses that incorporate early literacy and numeracy to help many children from Pre-School to High School.

Wendy Pittendrigh, Laurel Butcher, Davina Fraser, Dorothy Stephen and Margaret Greville make up the Move to Learn in W.A. team and with their support and encouragement we have successfully organized and conducted two “Move to Learn in W.A.” seminars and workshops.

Over the past year Margaret and I have conducted professional development for a number of country schools in the South West of Western Australia.

We know that early intervention is crucial to a child with learning difficulties. But why do we have to wait for the learning difficulty to be obvious before starting early intervention?

I believe we can do something about it before it happens especially in those first two years of school!

Let’s get all our schools in Australia Moving to Learn.
